

Would Have a Renfrew Street Renamed:

Sudbury News: The Renfrew Mercury reports the death of Private Colin J. Hickey, German street, who was killed in action on June 18th, this making the sixth young man from the same street who has given his life for the Empire. Is it not surprising that Renfrew with all its pride, pomp and patriotism would allow a street of that name in their town? We were going to suggest remodelling it, but it's impossible to take the germ out of a German. Anyway, as there are all kinds of suitable material lying around now for that kind of thing, why not knock down the old tin plate, and put up something in honor of those dead heroes?
